

At last, I get around to sewing my home curtains... Was about time... For these first curtains, I chose a pattern nothing out of the ordinary but one that I like very much nonetheless: stars!

I used organza white fabric to allow in light and ensure privacy. Then I lined a piece of organza fabric with some thermobinding fabric in which I cut up the stars.

Then I applied the stars with the sewing machine. By the way, the star template was in fact a pastry cutter! You can find the templates in the main message.

Ta-da! Nice and simple little curtains!
